Musical talent has long run in the veins of viral Country sensation Makenzie Phipps. Following in the footsteps of her uncle - Country music songwriter Ron Simons - Phipps has long been known as the little girl with the big voice in her home state of Virginia. But it is that talented little girl that has grown into a young, now Nashville-based recording artist whose talents shine brighter with each and every song she puts out. From her appearance on S28 of The Voice, to her viral covers of 'I Want To Stroll Over Heaven With You' and 'Amazing Grace' to her latest single 'Whiskey Kills the Time', to her press coverage in Forbes, People, American Songwriter, Taste of Country, Cowboys & Indians, Heartland, RFD-TV, and more, there is no doubt that this is just the beginning for Phipps within a music genre custom made for her voice, her sound, and her sweet sentiment.
